A Time-Tested Process

Making hand-carved furniture is a lengthy and delicate procedure. Every step from the initial design roughs to the finished product is executed with precision. The wood is chosen, seasoned and cared for before it is cut. Artisans use traditional hand tools like chisels and mallets to make intricate designs. The process takes time-weeks or even months depending on the type of the piece. This is due to the patience and abilities of craftsmen working on it, which resulted in beautiful and characterful furniture.
