The ban applies to all laptops and computers, including those that are assembled in India using imported components. However, the ban does not apply to laptops and computers that are imported for personal use.

The ban is likely to have a significant impact on the prices of laptops and computers in India. Prices are expected to rise by 10-15% in the short term. In the long term, prices may come down as domestic manufacturers ramp up production.

Customers who are looking to buy a laptop or computer in the near future should be aware of the ban and the potential impact on prices.

Increased prices

The ban is likely to lead to an increase in prices of laptops and computers in India. This is because the ban will reduce the supply of these products in the country.
