There are several natural ways to control mice in homes. Try to use some effective DIY tips:

Use repellents: Mice hate the smell of peppermint oil, cayenne pepper, cloves, ammonia, and other strong-smelling spices and herbs. You can dilute these in water and soak cotton balls, or create cheesecloth sachets with dry ingredients like cayenne, mint, and cloves

Place these sachets in areas where mice tend to hide.

Store food carefully: Keep food in sealed containers and avoid leaving food particles out, as mice can be attracted to even small amounts of food

Seal entry points: Mice can squeeze into tiny spaces, so it's essential to caulk cracks, improve weatherstripping around windows and doors, and fill vented holes with steel wool

Clean up your home: Mice are attracted to clutter, so keep your home neat and organized, clean up spills promptly, and store trash in closed bins

Use traps: Humane traps can be used to catch mice without harming them. Place the traps in areas where you have noticed mouse activity and check them regularly for caught mice.

Try ammonia: Mix a few spoons of detergent, a quarter glass of water, and two cups of ammonia in a bowl. Pour the solution into a small container and place it near the areas where mice are active. The strong smell will deter mice.

Use essential oils: Mice dislike the scents of cinnamon, eucalyptus, vinegar, citronella, and mothballs. You can use these essential oils in diffusers or mix them with water and soak cotton balls to place near potential entry points.
