Here are some prominent types of Italian marble that adorn our collection:

Carrara Marble: Hailing from the Carrara region in Italy, this marble is celebrated for its pristine white backdrop and subtle, feathery veining. Known for gracing iconic structures and sculptures, Carrara marble embodies a sense of sophistication and refinement.

Statuario Marble: Prized for its striking resemblance to the classic statuary, Statuario marble showcases a luminous white background adorned with bold, dramatic veins. Its luxurious appearance has made it a preferred choice for creating statement pieces in interiors.

Calacatta Marble: With a similar base to Carrara marble, Calacatta marble distinguishes itself through bolder and more pronounced veining in shades of gold and grey. This marble exudes opulence and is often utilized to add a touch of luxury to spaces.

Breccia Oniciata Marble: Characterized by its warm beige tones and swirling patterns, Breccia Oniciata marble exudes a sense of understated elegance. Its unique veining patterns make it a versatile choice for various design applications.

Travertine Marble: While not technically a marble, Travertine is a type of limestone that shares similar characteristics. Known for its earthy tones and natural pits, it offers a rustic charm and is often used in both indoor and outdoor designs.

Botticino Marble: Originating from the Brescia province in Italy, Botticino marble features a light beige hue with delicate veins, adding warmth and subtlety to spaces. It's often preferred for flooring and countertops due to its durability and charm.
