

Woman is left dumbfounded after she breaks record with 'humungous' 63lbs catch 'over half her size' while on fishing trip with her husband

A woman was left dumbfounded after she caught a record-breaking 63lbs carp 'over half her size' while on a fishing trip with her husband.

Ria Bignell, 27, broke the record for catching the biggest carp fish by a female in Britain, after reeling in the whopping 63lbs 11ozs catch at Waterside Fishery in Chesham, Buckinghamshire.

Her monster common carp was only 4lbs short of the record for the biggest carp ever caught in Britain which stands at 68lb 1oz.

The avid fisherwoman, who was on a trip with her husband Lee, said she first thought she had caught a tiddler when she got a bite as the fish didn't put up much of a fight.

It took her 30 minutes to reel in the catch and it was only when she saw it in her net that she realised just how big it was.

Ria Bignell, 27, broke the record for catching the biggest carp by a female in Britain with a 63lbs 11ozs fish

