

Majestic Ancient Giant. A 2000-Year-Old Redwood with a Car-Sized Passage at Its Core!aa

Dotted around the northern regions of California are a handful of the oldest redwoods and giant sequoias in the world, reaching up to the skies like something out of Tolkien's universe.

These colossal trees can grow to be over 300ft high and 3,000 years old. Over time, their trunks have become wide enough for enterprising locals to hollow out the middle to create incredible drive-through trees.
