

Who has the Most Dangerous Roads? aa

These are the most dangerous countries based on road conditions. This is not something to be fearful of, just something to be cautious of.

1. Greece:
  - Greece has mountainous terrain and winding roads, especially in rural areas and on the islands. Some roads may lack safety barriers or guardrails.
2. Italy:
  - Italy's mountainous regions, such as the Dolomites, can have challenging roads. Additionally, some coastal roads can be narrow and winding.
3. Portugal:
  - Portugal's hilly and mountainous terrain can result in roads with steep inclines, sharp turns, and occasional challenging conditions.
4. Norway:
  - Norway's roads can be challenging due to its rugged landscapes, including fjords, mountains, and remote areas with limited infrastructure.
5. Iceland:
  - Iceland's extreme weather conditions, including ice and snow, can make its roads particularly challenging, especially during winter.
6. Romania:
  - Romania has some challenging roads in rural and mountainous areas, where conditions may be less developed compared to urban areas.
7. Siberia:
  - Siberia, with its vast and remote terrain, can have challenging roads, particularly in areas with extreme weather conditions.
8. Albania:
  - Albania's mountainous landscape can result in roads with steep inclines, sharp turns, and limited safety features.
9. Bosnia and Herzegovina:
  - The hilly and mountainous terrain in Bosnia and Herzegovina can result in challenging road conditions, particularly in rural areas.

It's important to exercise caution and follow local traffic regulations when driving in any country, especially in areas with challenging road conditions.
