

South32's Q1 Manganese Output Plunges as Aussie Operations Fail to Produce

South32 announced on Monday that its South32 Q1 manganese output has experienced a significant decline, with its Australia operations projected to resume production by the end of the year. This sharp decrease in output has been attributed to the extensive disruptions caused by a tropical cyclone that struck in March.

Read More