Reading Time: 7 minutes

Do you like using checks but want a better and safer version? The electronic check is the perfect way to get money to whoever you need to pay in a check form, but since everything is electronic, you have less risk of the check being lost or stolen.

It's safer, it's faster, and it's way more efficient. But how does it work? Answers to this question, plus why to use an eCheck, and more, are below.

What Is an eCheck and How Does It Work?

An eCheck is a check but in an electronic form. It's a payment you make from your checking account.

It gets withdrawn from the account and transferred using the automated clearinghouse (ACH) network. This allows the eCheck to be sent to the intended person or business.

A lot of times, an eCheck will make more sense than sending a paper check. This is especially true if sending the check through the mail or if you aren't going to be able to hand the check in person to the recipient.

eChecks are extremely helpful, and it's wise to know how to use them in case you ever need to.

How can I send an electronic check to someone?

You need to pay someone, and you want to use a check, but not a paper one. You can send an electronic check to someone using your bank or another service that helps with electronic checks.

The person you're paying can send you a payment form online for you to fill out. Just remember to add all the detailed information you'll need.

Why use eChecks?

Is this process more complicated than a regular paper check? Why even use it?

No, actually, eChecks are more convenient and quicker than a routine check. Here's why.

First is the convenience factor. You don't have to mail an electronic check. You just send it electronically, so there is no need to find stamps and mail it, hoping it doesn't get stolen.

Also, there's no paper to fill out like there is with a paper check, saving you time. And an eCheck can be scheduled as a recurring payment if you like, which is much better than having to write one out every time a bill is due.

As you can see, eChecks are far more convenient. It's also faster than using a paper check.
